Firth Town Hall Meeting is First Step in Visioning

About twenty residents living in and near Firth community met in the Firth Community Center to learn about the Visioning Process.

To help residents understand the process, the group learned how planning and visioning activities resulted in the improvement of communities in Kansas City, Portland and Seattle. Extension Educators Yelena Mitrofanova and Phyllis Schoenholz explained the steps, commitment and time line in the Visioning process for the community. As the process moves forward, all community residents are invited to become involved.

Community volunteers signed up for three committees. Logistics committee will plan for upcoming dates, times and places for Listening Sessions to be planned this spring. The Communications committee will help publicize and promote the Listening sessions and Town Hall report. The Research committee will search out the demographics, infrastructure and assets of the community that will be needed for future planning.
