earth wellness festival story...

In the Spring of 1994 a petition was signed by over 325 Lincoln Public School teachers emphasizing the need for a local water event.

Ten educational resource agencies collaborated and the conception of the earth wellness festival was born.

Southeast Community College in Lincoln donated the use of their campus facility for the festival.

Four hundred educators, environmentalists and government representatives step up and volunteer at the event each year.

Nearly 3,000 Lancaster County fifth graders attend the earth wellness festival annually. In 17 years over 48,000 youth will have attended this exciting and educational event.

Activities that are creative, hands on and educational support the mission each year.

Participants gain a better understanding of environmental issues.

Volunteers just like you make ewf possible. Please complete the online registration at: Lancaster.unl.edu/ewf or return this reply form by March 1st.

Each year over 250 volunteers take part in the earth wellness festival activities. We welcome everyone to help:

- Business/Industry Employees
- College Students
- Student Teachers
- Parents
- Grandparents
- Service Club Members
- Community Members
- High School Students

As a festival volunteer, you receive:

- A remarkable and rewarding experience
- A festival t-shirt
- Coffee, rolls and lunch
